

What is the benefit of our Wi-Fi solution?

If you are frustrated by the Wi-Fi coverage in your home, there is an exciting new alternative available. Called a Mesh Wi-Fi network, this new technology combines a Wi-Fi router with one or more satellites, which are small wireless devices you place in different rooms. These satellites communicate with the router and provide you with a strong Wi-Fi signal everywhere in your home; even in your backyard. There are two Mesh Wi-Fi options available:

1. Pay a visit to the nearest consumer electronics store and purchase a Mesh Wi-Fi system. These systems typically consist of a router and one, sometimes two, satellites. While this may seem like the simplest option, there are a couple of drawbacks.
  - Consumer-grade Mesh Wi-Fi systems are expensive. While you can purchase some starter systems for around $300, others can cost upwards of $500, depending on the number of additional satellites you need to extend coverage throughout your home.
  - You are responsible for installing the system and managing it on an ongoing basis. This may or may not be a problem, depending on your comfort level with technology.

2. Purchase your Mesh Wi-Fi as a service from your service provider. Instead of paying several hundred dollars up front for a consumer-grade system that you must install and manage by yourself, you can get the best Mesh Wi-Fi system available—with superior performance and coverage—and rely on us to take care of any technical issues that may come up. The benefits to this solution:

- Our Mesh Wi-Fi satellite units costs just $x and, when combined with a GigaCenter Wi-Fi router, will provide full coverage for 99% of homes.
- We can access your Wi-Fi router remotely if there are any issues, then quickly identify and resolve your issues, so you won't experience any downtime.

This solution provides more flexibility than consumer-grade systems, which require you to buy satellite units in groups of two or three. If you only need one Wi-Fi satellite unit in your home, this means you only have to pay for one.
